Making Knowledge part of YOUR HEALTH PLAN

CLF

The CLF health education series is offered annually to residents of the Oakland community to enhance public awareness of primary health issues affecting them.

The Community Learning Forum (CLF) is a series of health education seminars created to educate, empower, and engage the local community on topics of primary health matters. Each seminar focuses on a specific health-related topic (e.g., diabetes, osteoporosis, or cancer) and is taught by Samuel Merritt University faculty with expertise in these areas. The objective for each seminar is to introduce participants to the fundamental concepts that underlie a primary health issue, with the overall goal to empower members of the community to better understand how these issues impact their lives and community.

The CLF series was founded and developed by faculty members Richard Rocco, PhD, and Christina Lewis, PhD in 2011. Since that time, the CLF series has evolved into a partnership between SMU and the Allen Temple Baptist Church.

Dr. Rocco is an associate professor in the Basic Sciences Department and teaches pharmacology at SMU.

Dr. Lewis is an assistant professor in the Basic Sciences Department where she teaches anatomy, physiology, and pathophysiology.

ELMARIE BOTHA, RN, MSN, ACNP
ASSISTANT PROFESSOR, NURSING

Elmarie Botha teaches the Managing Care of Adults course in the undergraduate nursing program. She is also an Acute Care Nurse Practitioner (ACNP) and Registered Nurse (RN) who specializes in caring for patients with cardiac disease. She is passionate about nursing and patient education, and has a particular interest in helping patients identify and reduce their risks for cardiac disease.

CIARA COX, PhD, OTL
ASSISTANT PROFESSOR, OCCUPATIONAL THERAPY

Ciara Cox teaches courses in occupational therapy for the adult population, research, and professional development. Her research interests are in the effectiveness of therapy programs in nursing homes, with particular interest in dementia care and fall prevention.

MICHAEL DE ROSA, MPH, PhD, PA-C
CHAIR, PHYSICIAN ASSISTANT

Michael De Rosa teaches physiology and pathophysiology in the Physician Assistant program. He works in family practice at Bayside Medical Group in Berkeley. Dr. De Rosa holds a PhD in Neuroscience from UCLA and has a special interest in primary care neurological issues in primary care. His research interests are based on medical international trips to Panama where he has recently introduced a pictographic prescription instruction form to improve compliance among patients who are illiterate or speak indigenous languages.

MARJORIE HAMMER, MSN, FNP
ASSISTANT PROFESSOR, NURSING

Marjorie Hammer is a family nurse practitioner (FNP) and psychiatric mental health nurse practitioner. Formerly, she was a nurse and FNP at Oakland Children's Hospital and Research Center for 20 years—primarily in pediatric hematology, oncology, HIV, and specialized in individuals and families living with sickle cell anemia. She is particularly interested in the mental health of children and families, including those dealing with chronic or life-threatening illness.

ROLANDO LAZARO, PT, PhD, DPT, GCS
ASSOCIATE PROFESSOR AND CO-CHAIR, PHYSICAL THERAPY

Rolando Lazaro is a licensed physical therapist, and a board-certified geriatric clinical specialist (GCS) by the American Board of Physical Therapy Specialties (ABPTS). His clinical and research focus is on interventions that improve balance and mobility in the older population. He is part of the Samuel Merritt University—Allen Temple—East Oakland Health Home Collaborative (EOHHC) Health Screening Workgroup.

DEBBIE SOMMER, MLS
LIBRARIAN, JOHN A. GRAZIANO MEMORIAL LIBRARY

Debbie Sommer teaches research skills, database searching, and reference management to students and faculty. Recently she received certificates from the National Library of Medicine clinicaltrials.gov and PubMed for Trainers programs. She realizes the impact of information overload and she is passionate about helping others locate and evaluate reliable health information.

MICHAEL LEAVER, APRN, CS
ASSISTANT PROFESSOR, NURSING

Michael Leaver teaches courses on healthy aging, community health, mental health, and professional nursing. She graduated from the University of California San Francisco with a clinical specialty in mental health with a focus on these issues in the older adult. Michael has worked in hospitals and long-term care facilities—and with assisted living, pharmaceutical research, legal consulting, private case management, community health, and most recently teaching nursing students at SMU.

RICHARD ROCCO, PhD
ASSOCIATE PROFESSOR, BASIC SCIENCES

Richard M. Rocco teaches pharmacology in several programs. His research interests include the pathophysiological basis of the complications of diabetes, and he enjoys his work developing low-cost, battery-operated laboratory instrumentation used by SMU faculty and students on their medical outreach service to remote clinics in developing countries.

CHRISTINA LEWIS, PhD
ASSISTANT PROFESSOR, BASIC SCIENCES

Christina C. Lewis teaches gross anatomy, physiology, and pathophysiology in the nurse anesthesia, occupational therapy, and physician assistant programs. Her academic interests focus on pulmonary physiology, pathophysiology, genetic and genomic studies of disease, and asthma—her main research interest is asthma. She currently is researching the role of the airway epithelium in mediating asthma pathogenesis.

GAIL WIDENER, PhD, PT
PROFESSOR, PHYSICAL THERAPY

Gail Widener teaches neuroscience and physiology in the Doctor of Physical Therapy program at SMU. Her main clinical and research interest is reducing falls in the elderly and those with neurological problems such as multiple sclerosis and ataxia. Dr. Widener's research has been funded by the NIH and National Multiple Sclerosis Society to investigate interventions that improve mobility and balance in people with neurological dysfunction.

CHI-KWAN SHEA, PhD, OTR/L
ASSOCIATE PROFESSOR, OCCUPATIONAL THERAPY

Chi-Kwan Shea has accumulated extensive professional experience in clinical, administrative, academic, and research areas for more than 30 years. Since 2000, she has volunteered at a community-based program that serves at-risk youth by providing her professional consultation services and conducting research studies for the program that focus on the development of theory-based interventions that promote social justice for the at-risk youth population.
